(From the Sydney Mail, October 12)

Mr. Macarthur, can only be accomplished by means of industrial boarding-schools, to be established in each district, near the county town, with a sufficiently large area of good land around them, an efficient staff of teachers, and accommodation for three or four hundred children. He suggests that the session shall begin in January and terminate in June, the children going home to give a hand in the busy shearing season. The schools to be near a central populous point, in order to secure a market for surplus produce, as well as the advantages of religious instruction and medical attendance. Government would, of course, supply the land and erect the requisite buildings; the Board of Education would be responsible for the instruction, while the expenses of management and maintenance would be made to fall upon the parents primarily, and Government as a dernier ressort.

There are great grumblings about the Billancourt competitions. Some of the competitors, taking the matter into their own hands, have opened a subscription, and organised a grand ploughing match for themselves, in which the various steam tillage systems will be exhibited. Of this, which was to come off in September, we shall not hear just yet.

We perfectly agree with our Araluen correspondent, "A Farmer," as to the necessity which exists for a comprehensive Act of Parliament that shall deal with the water rights of this colony. Before much draining is done this should be done. Vested interests will soon become numerous and complicated, and then it will be as difficult to deal with the subject as it is in England. Perhaps the writer will favour us with his case. The benefits to be derived from drainage are freely acknowledged by those

A USEFUL INVENTION.—Artificial ice, the New York Evening Post says, can be made quite easily by a steam engine. It is a device of great advantage during this hot weather. The principle is very simple. It is a good air-pump. On the top of the air-pump is a plate containing sulphuric acid; place a small stool in the plate, and on the stool set a small tray with a steam pipe in it. Over all place a low, glass cover, fitting tight. The pump being worked, the air is forced out, and with the removal of the pressure, the water evaporates rapidly. It soon begins to boil in consequence of the development of heat. Meanwhile the vapour, carrying the heat away with it, is absorbed by the sulphuric acid. The water is actually frozen solid while it seems to boil. Further, the apparatus could be improved, or the principle be used for the production of ice in large quantities, remains to be proved. But if the act of manufacturing ice on a large scale shall be discovered, we may expect to see ice factories built all over the world. Experiments have already been made with a fair result, and the production of artificial ice at a cost much less than that of the blocks left at doors by the ice-carts.

In Texas, a few days ago, an old lady named Metcalf attempted to walk to a neighbour's, but took the wrong road, and while approaching the house of a man named Simms, for she was a widow, she was attacked by a pack of savage dogs, which bit her in several places, tore one arm from her body, and nearly cut up her breast and neck, causing death in a few minutes.

One of these scholastic policemen states that he has seen the corpse of a single year (1862), "recorded the names of 321 truant boys," the proof of 2691 truants. This was the record of one district only in the City of Boston. There is a general law in the State of Massachusetts under which similar records are kept in every town, and it is at the discretion of each town whether to enforce the law or not. In most communities it is left to its idle, and the expense involved in its rigorous execution is doubtless one reason why it is not more generally enforced. In the City of Boston, however, it is paid for and a place of punishment is provided, and a law can be carried into effect. Obviously, there is a very practical reason to account for the fact that the advantages of education are so generally distributed in the City of Boston. The city deserves the greatest credit for its policy. It has not hesitated to make to support its schools, but it is nothing to the credit of the poor that they send their children to them. They dare not send them anywhere else. It is no disgrace for despaching their boys or girls to work, and to earn money, and it is at the greatest obstacle to the education of the very poor—namely, the impossibility of securing the regular attendance of pupils, a got rid of in one stroke. The end doubtless justifies the means, and the process would scarcely recommend itself at present.

But simplicity of style can hardly be looked for in instructions which are managed by gentlemen who have been writing the Boston Record for half a century. I quote the passage from the Record for 1865, where the school is found in company with even finer gems: "It only remains for us to remember: the rich, rounded, golden fruitage of our schools that having passed the angel reapers have sown the seed of the heavenly inheritance of purple and gold that tapstried the morning sky, borne to the realms above." This might well be given as an exercise in syntax to the students in the high school. To have a chance of being borne through the Boston Academy is a special advantage enjoyed by the Bostonian schoolboy.

But apart from all deductions that may be made, the public schools of Boston are unquestionably an inestimable benefit to the community. The city has worked nobly in a great cause, and it must have been the means of doing more good than any one will ever be able to do. During the past twelve years the authorities have raised by taxation and applied to educational purposes nearly 7,000,000 dollars. They have now under their control 280 schools, in which the average number of pupils in 1866 was, 37,723. The expenses of the schools for that one year amounted to $1,000,000. The average cost per scholar was $29.77 dollars. The pay of the teachers, and of the other school officers, was $1,000,000. It can well be, averaging less than 55 dollars a month for males, and less than 22 dollars for females. These frequent complaints of the inadequacy of this remuneration are, perhaps, the best founded of all those which are made against the public schools.

THE SYDNEY MORNING HERALD, MONDAY, OCTOBER 14, 1867.

1919.—We are informed that a couple of watches were found on the 10th instant. One of the watches was a gold watch, and the other a pocket of a waistcoat belonging to Mr. Lockett had been left in the small tent where he engaged the room. The watches were valued at £22. In the evening the man who found the watches was Mr. Bly's. A notice was put up that the watches were for sale and the person to whom the watches were sold, left the shop for the purpose of taking the watches to the police; whilst doing so, however, he was detained by a constable and the watches were taken in the custody of the constable.

Early on Saturday morning Inspector Auerbach's men were sent to the of fish, which, although not then in authorized season, were far distributed over the city. The only sale of unwholesome fish appears to have been a sale of a quantity of small fish, and where it would be possible to a series surveillance. The situation of the pond could scarcely be more than the quality of the food subsisted on.

BEAUTIFUL SUBURBAN SITE
COPP'S DAIRY.
MARRICKVILLE

MARRICKVILLE
at the junction of the Marrickville

and NURSERY, within easy distance of the STANMORE ROAD and about one mile from the PETERSHAM RAILWAY STATION. It contains an area of upwards of 3 acres, being lot 2 of section 3 of the plan No. 2 of the Sydney farms. The land is well enclosed with a three rail fence, and nearly the whole has been situated and cleared about 4 acres having been in cultivation. The other improvements comprise two small cottages, good stabling, and a milking shed of six stalls.

This is one of the best sites in this improved popular locality, and is approached by a good metalled road which was adapted from Sydney. The land is superior, and well adapted for garden and orchard purposes, and is in a strategic position for the erection of a suburban homestead.

Plans of the property and title deeds may be inspected at the Rooms.

RICHARDSON and WRENCH have received instructions to sell by public auction, at the Rooms, Pitt-street, THIS DAY, 14th October, at 11 o'clock.

Special attention is directed to the SALE of this piece of land. It occupies a fine elevated site opposite Mr. Detman's, and just behind Frogmore, the estate of the late Mr. Despoines. The views from the land are extensive and very pretty—without exception, the position is the most valuable in this favourite suburb.

WINDMILL-STREET with large block of land

RICHARDSON and WRENCH have received instructions from Mr. JOHN McILLAN to sell by public auction, at the Rooms, Pitt-street, THIS DAY, 14th October, at 11 o'clock.

The premises are extensive and in first-rate order. The position offers many advantages for a private residence but is unequalled at Miller's Point, being nearly opposite the road to the North Shore ferry and Macnamara's Wharf; also close to Fort and Argyle streets.

The sale is peremptory, the proprietor's great age (75 years) not permitting him to manage the property longer.
